Want free college or career training? It's possible!

If you are eligible for the Aged, Blind, or Disabled (ABD) program, you are likely eligible for WA Grant

The Washington College Grant (WA Grant) gives people money for education beyond high school, like certificate programs, job training, apprenticeships, or college. This is not a loan—it is free money for education or training that does not have to be paid back.

WA Grant is available for all ages

You and your family can benefit, whether you have a child about to graduate from high school or you want to train for a new career. The amount you receive depends on your family size, your income, and the cost of your school or program. But eligible ABD recipients typically qualify for a full award, which means public college tuition would likely be free.

You don't have to go to school or attend career training full time to access WA Grant

There are many part-time opportunities, so you can work, raise your family, and pursue your career goals all at the same time. WA Grant recipients must meet program requirements and attend an approved college or program.

How ABD recipients can qualify for WA Grant

People who qualify for ABD can automatically be considered for WA Grant without completing a financial aid application like the federal FAFSA form. If you meet the residency and program requirements, you can get free money for education or training. Learn more at wsac.wa.gov/wcg-connect.
