9:00 AM

Washington: Climate Change Education: Building Networks, Plans and Resources

We need all hands-on deck to address climate change and other environmental challenges. How can high-school and college students apply their academic skills and ingenuity to improve our environment and economic sustainability? E3 has been working with scientists and other specialists to develop a toolkit and network plans.

10:00 AM

Washington: Green Jobs, How Do We Build Skills for Future Careers?

The Pacific Education Institute will present their new report on the Green Jobs and the skills those careers require. We will discuss connecting K-12 education with higher education, and, ultimately, future “Green” jobs. We will also tie in Next Generation Science and Common Core standards and removing barriers to access among under-resourced and under-represented communities.

2:15 to 3:45 PM

Washington: Students Present their Environmental Education and Climate Change Projects

Students from around Washington State will presentations their science, climate and environmental projects, followed by gallery walk. Learn about developing successful NGSS and career-connected learning projects. Student projects support Governor Jay Inslee's work to combat climate change and develop the new Green economy.
