2001-02 WASHINGTON STATE TUITION AND FEE REPORT

January 2002

Introduction

By state law, the Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) is charged with recommending state tuition and fee policies to the Governor and Legislature. As part of its analysis, Board staff conducts an annual survey of tuition and fee rates at public colleges and universities in all 50 states to determine how Washington State tuition and fees compare both nationally and with other Western states. In addition, staff examines how tuition and fees at individual Washington institutions compare with tuition and fees charged by their respective “peer” institutions.

A joint legislative and executive study group, in consultation with the HECB, adopted a national comparison “peer” group for each of the following: (1) the University of Washington (flagship), (2) Washington State University, (3) comprehensive institutions, which include Central, Eastern and Western Washington Universities, (4) The Evergreen State College, and (5) the Washington community college system.

The Board has conducted a national survey of tuition and required fees at public colleges and universities for more than 30 years. Undergraduate and graduate tuition and fees are based on data from 214 and 194 public colleges and universities, respectively. Required fees are fees paid by all full-time students and do not include any optional fees such as parking or health care unless they are paid by all full-time students.

Following is a summary of how 2001-02 tuition and fees at Washington colleges and universities compare with other Western states, with all 50 states, and with peer institutions.

Key Findings

Washington Resident Undergraduate Students

- Pay the third highest tuition and fees among students attending the flagship universities in the 15 Western states.
- Pay the fourth highest tuition and fees among students attending comprehensive universities in the 15 Western states.

- Pay less than the national average for tuition and fees at public comprehensive and research colleges and universities.
- Pay lower tuition and fees than students at peer institutions.

Washington Nonresident Undergraduate Students

- Pay the fourth highest tuition and fees among students attending the flagship universities in the 15 Western states.
- Pay the highest tuition and fees among students attending comprehensive institutions in the 15 Western states.
- Pay more than the national average for tuition and fees at the University of Washington and less than the national average at Washington State University.
- Pay significantly more than the national average for tuition and fees at public comprehensive colleges and universities.
- Pay higher tuition and fees at the comprehensive institutions and The Evergreen State College, and lower tuition and fees at the research universities than the respective peer group average.

Washington Resident and Nonresident Graduate Students

- Pay the second highest resident tuition and fees among students attending public research and comprehensive institutions in the 15 Western states.
- Pay significantly more than the national average for resident and nonresident tuition and fees at public colleges and universities.
- Pay significantly higher nonresident tuition and fees than students at peer institutions.

Washington Resident and Nonresident Community College Students

Residents

- Pay significantly higher than average tuition and fees at community colleges in the 15 Western states.
- Pay less than the national average for tuition and fees at community colleges.

Nonresidents

- Pay the second highest tuition and fees among community college students in the 15 Western states.
- Pay significantly more than the national average for tuition and fees among community college students.

I. 2001-02 WASHINGTON STATE TUITION AND FEES

National Comparison

To better understand how Washington tuition and fee rates compare nationally, HECB staff looked at three categories: (1) flagship universities, (2) comprehensive colleges and state universities, and (3) community colleges. The following summary tables provide an overview of the relationship of tuition and fee rates at Washington colleges and universities to national averages.

For more detailed analysis by category and a national perspective over the last five years, see the tables in Section IV (National Tables 1-10). Tables 1 through 4 represent tuition and fee rates at the public flagship university in each state. Tables 9 and 10 display state averages for community colleges.

Tables 5 through 8 represent the average tuition and fees for a selected set of comprehensive colleges and universities in all 50 states. This set of comprehensive colleges and universities, created in 1969, is composed of 215 institutions reporting undergraduate tuition and fees and 195 of those reporting graduate tuition and fees. Although not all public institutions are included in this survey, the averages and changes over time with the same set of institutions offer consistency while the large number of institutions provides a close approximation of state averages.

Services and activities fees and technology fees may not always increase at the same rate as “tuition,” i.e. operating and building fee. See “Tuition Structure and Control” (page 8) for a more complete description.

Western States Comparison

HECB staff compared tuition and fees at Washington public colleges and universities with those at public colleges and universities in 14 other Western states. Like Washington, these states are members of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE). They include Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

The summary table below compares Washington tuition and fee rates with those of other WICHE states. Please note that the comprehensive universities include Central, Eastern and Western Washington Universities. The Evergreen State College is represented within its own peer group and, consequently, is represented in the Peer Institution Comparison section.

For more detailed analysis, see the tables in Section IV in this report (WICHE States Tables 1-10). Tables 1 through 8 display historical and current tuition and required fee rates for full-time undergraduate and graduate students at public four-year colleges and universities in the Western states. Tables 9 and 10 display the average tuition and fee rates for community colleges in each Western state.

Peer Institution Comparison

In 1988, the HECB undertook a study to develop peer groups reflecting a national perspective. Concurrently, a special joint legislative and executive study group was appointed to review the higher education master plan funding recommendations, with peer comparison groups identified as one of its areas of study. The Joint Study Group and the Board worked together and adopted the following peer policies:

1. The Carnegie Commission's classification of institutions is used as the basis for selecting comparison groups for Washington institutions of higher education.
2. The national comparison group for the University of Washington is all public institutions in the Carnegie classification Research Universities category 1 with medical schools.
3. The national comparison group for Washington State University is all public land grant universities in the Carnegie classification Research Universities categories 1 and 2 with veterinary schools.
4. The national comparison group for Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities is all public institutions in the Carnegie classification Comprehensive Colleges and Universities category 1.
5. The national comparison group for the Washington community college system is all state community college systems.

In 1990, the HECB adopted a peer group for The Evergreen State College using the Carnegie Commission classification of institutions. The Board screened a composite category of public institutions in the Comprehensive I and Liberal Arts II classification and selected peer institutions based on size, similarities of degrees awarded, and other characteristics common to The Evergreen State College.

The summary table on the following page shows tuition and fee rates at Washington public colleges and universities compared to those of their respective peer groups.

For more detailed analysis, see the tables in Section IV of this report. Peers Tables 1 through 20 display peer groups for the University of Washington, Washington State University and The Evergreen State College. Peer groups for Washington comprehensive institutions, with the exception of The Evergreen State College, are represented in National Tables 5 through 8. Washington community colleges are represented in National Tables 9 and 10. Peer groups for the University of Washington and Washington State University professional programs are shown in Peers Tables 9 through 16.

Also included in the peer comparison section (Peers Tables 9 through 16) are tuition and fee data for the University of Washington's professional programs of medical, dental, and law. Tables 15 and 16 display veterinary medicine tuition and fee rates for Washington State University and their national peer group.

II. TUITION STRUCTURE AND CONTROL

Components of Tuition and Fees

Often the phrase "tuition and fees" is used to refer to the charges that all students pay to attend a college or university. At Washington colleges and universities, "tuition and fees" includes operating fees, building fees, services and activities fees, and technology fees. The actual "tuition" portion, as outlined in statute, includes operating fees and building fees.

In this report, the word "tuition" refers to all major types of fees (operating, building, services and activities, and technology fees). However, for legislation, which specifies "tuition," as is the case currently where allowable tuition increases are specified in statute, tuition refers only to the total of operating and building fees combined.

Operating Fee

The operating fee represents 75 to 90 percent of tuition and fees and primarily funds instructional activities of the institution.

Building Fee

The building fee, which comprises 3 to 9 percent of tuition and fees, is used to fund building projects and retire bonds. During most of the past decade, the building fee portion of tuition was a fixed dollar amount set in statute. While operating fees increased, the building fee did not. Legislative changes in 1993 provided for increases in the amount of tuition dedicated to building fees. In 1995-96, the building fee became a percentage of total tuition and fees, rather than a fixed amount and, consequently, increased as overall tuition increased.¹

Services and Activities Fee

The services and activities fee (S&A), which represents 9 to 13 percent of tuition and fees, funds non-instructional student activities and programs, including some bond repayments for student-support facilities. S&A fees may increase each year, if the services and activities fee committee at an institution initiates a request. However, the S&A rate increases may not exceed tuition rate increases for the applicable tuition category.²

Technology Fee

In 1996, the Legislature also authorized the public four-year institutions to impose technology fees of up to $120 per year. Four institutions, including the University of Washington, Western Washington University, Central Washington University, and Eastern Washington University, now charge this fee. Capped at $120, the technology fee may be adjusted or abolished with approval of the student government association and the institutional governing board.³

The table on the following page illustrates the relationship among the various fees for resident undergraduates.

Responsibility for Setting Tuition

In Washington, the Legislature has had the authority to set tuition for several decades. Nationally, states approach tuition setting differently. Ten state legislatures set tuition levels for four-year institutions, and eight maintain this responsibility for their two-year sector. The most common practice, used in about two-thirds of the states, is for the Legislature to delegate tuition-setting responsibility to the system-wide governing board. About one-third of the states vest the authority in the institutional or local governing board and a few states direct the state higher education agency to set tuition levels.⁴

Control of Tuition and Fee Revenues

Institutions retain the operating, services and activities, and technology fees in local institutional accounts and deposit building fees in dedicated accounts at the state treasury.

⁴ State Higher Education Executive Officers (SHEEO), "State Tuition and Fee Policies, 1996-97." Page 2, March 1997.

Amount of Tuition Revenue Generated

Washington public colleges and universities receive operating resources for instruction from two primary sources: operating fee revenue (tuition) and the state General Fund. In fiscal year 2001-02, institutions will receive about $447 million from tuition and $1.2 billion from the state General Fund.⁵

Tuition at Washington's Technical Colleges

In 1991, Washington's technical colleges merged with the community college system. Although the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges (SBCTC) now oversees both the technical and community colleges, the two types of schools set tuition differently. Following the merger, a SBCTC task force reviewed the tuition process and recommended, with SBCTC approval, that tuition responsibility for the technical colleges remain at the local level. Technical colleges (and the Seattle Vocational Institute) set tuition and retain it in local accounts. The task force determined that this method provides significant flexibility and allows the colleges to make decisions based on local needs.

Each technical college sets tuition locally, based on program costs and market influences. Tuition rates are generally comparable across the technical colleges for similar programs and comparable to rates at community colleges.

III. TUITION HISTORY IN WASHINGTON STATE

Historical Overview

1977-1995: Legislature Links Tuition Rates to the Cost of Instruction

Between 1977 and 1995, the Legislature established tuition rates as a percentage of the cost of instruction. In 1977, when this approach was enacted by the Legislature, a Carnegie Commission study, Who Pays? Who Benefits? Who Should Pay? determined that, nationally, tuition covered 24 percent of the cost of instruction at public higher education institutions. The Commission recommended that this proportion be increased to 33 percent within 10 years.

Under this “cost-sharing” approach, the student contributed a portion of the cost and the state provided the remainder. Cost-sharing assumes that both the student and society benefit from having an educated and productive citizenry.

To determine undergraduate and graduate instructional costs, the Legislature directed the HECB to develop and perform a cost study every four years.⁶ Using cost study data, the HECB transmitted to the institutions the cost basis upon which tuition would be established.

1995-1999: Legislature Sets Tuition in Statute

In 1995, the Legislature removed the direct link to the cost of instruction and instead set tuition in statute as dollar amounts for each public institution. Although 1995 legislative intent stated that the tuition increases of 1995-96 and 1996-97 were a “transition measure until final action is taken in 1997,”⁷ the practice of specifying dollar amounts was continued through the 1997-99 biennium.

Tuition amounts (or percentage increases) specified in statute have referred only to the “tuition” portion of tuition and fees. Public colleges and universities may assess additional fees, such as services and activities fees and technology fees. State statutes establish maximum amounts that can be charged for these additional fees, which vary by institution.

The Legislature also directed the HECB to continue to conduct the cost study and submit “approved undergraduate and graduate educational costs to the several boards of regents and trustees of the state institutions of higher education by November 10 of each even-numbered year...”⁸

1999-2001: Legislature Gives Limited Tuition-Setting Authority to Institutions

For the first time, in academic year 2000, the Legislature and Governor gave institutions limited local tuition-setting authority, within maximums. The 1999-01 operating budget authorized colleges and universities to increase tuition up to 4.6 percent in the 1999-00 academic year and 3.6 percent in the 2000-01 academic year.

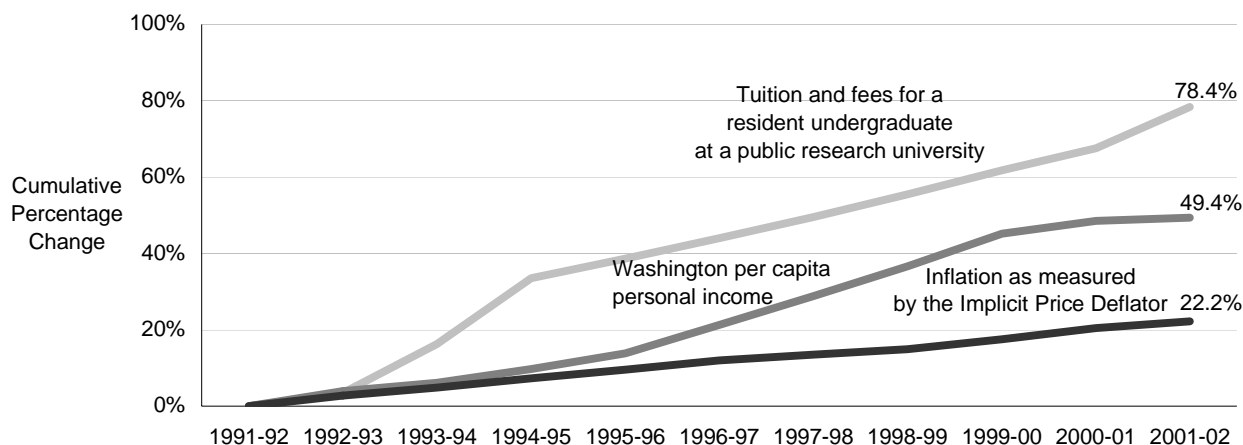

2001-2002: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority Continues

The Legislature and Governor continued to give institutions limited local tuition-setting authority in academic year 2002, with limits of 6.7 percent for the 2001-02 academic year and 6.1 percent for the 2002-03 academic year. For academic year 2002, tuition limits were 12 percent for graduate programs of law and business. The University of Washington, however, was allowed to increase tuition at its graduate business programs by up to 15 percent.

Tuition Increases Over Time

Washington resident undergraduate tuition has increased significantly since 1991-92. In 2001-02, tuition growth outpaced Washington per capita personal income (PCPI) and inflation. The growth in the rate of inflation continues to lag both tuition and the PCPI.

The following tables show the changes in tuition over the past decade for full-time undergraduate and graduate students. The first table presents the average tuition and fees for resident undergraduate students at Washington public research, comprehensive and community college institutions. The second table presents the average tuition and fees for graduate students at the research and comprehensive institutions. Please note that optional technology fees, authorized by the Legislature in 1996, are included.

For the last several years, actual tuition and fees have varied slightly among institutions within each category. However, the variation at any institution is within $50 of the average shown below.

^ Technology fees instituted.

* Washington State University has charged slightly higher tuition and fees than the University of Washington since 1996-97.

 The Evergreen State College, although not included in this average, charges tuition and fees similar to comprehensive institutions.

Note: The table above does not reflect the higher tuition rates for students in professional programs such as medicine, dentistry, law, and business/accounting programs.

Tuition Changes in 2001-02

Legislative Authorization

The 2001 Appropriations Act (ESSB 6153, section 601) stated that both two-year and four-year colleges and universities “may implement” an increase for full-time students no greater than 6.7 percent for the 2000-01 academic year. As noted earlier, the Legislature and Governor authorized tuition increases of up to 12 percent for graduate law and business school programs, and up to 15 percent for the University of Washington business school program.

Institutions could make adjustments below the maximum “for factors that may include time of day and day of week, as well as delivery method and campus, to encourage full use of the state’s educational facilities and resources.” Furthermore, institutions did not need to apply increases uniformly across all student categories as long as increases in individual student categories did not exceed the specified percentages.

Institutional Response

Most colleges and universities increased tuition to the maximum allowed. However, there were exceptions. The University of Washington and Washington State University raised graduate resident and nonresident tuition by only 3.5 percent and the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges raised tuition for resident and nonresident students by only 6.2 percent.

The University of Washington increased tuition by 12 percent for its law program and 15 percent (resident) and 10 percent (nonresident) for its graduate program in business. The UW also created a new tuition category of Master of Professional Accounting and increased tuition in this program by 10 percent over 2000-01 graduate rates.

Data Methods

All data contained in this report were compiled using Washington Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) surveys of state agencies or individual institutions. HECB staff greatly appreciates the continued cooperation and assistance of survey respondents. Their efforts to provide accurate and timely data have helped make these reports source documents for many states as they develop their own tuition and fee analyses.

With each annual survey, respondents have an opportunity to review and revise previously reported data. Though small in number, such revisions modestly affect the national averages from those displayed in earlier reports. Revisions may reflect a mid-year surcharge, discontinuation of a nonresident differential, or an adjustment in incidental fees.

Data for the state colleges and universities in Tables 5 through 8 represent the average undergraduate charges at 214 state public institutions and the average graduate charges at 194 of those with graduate programs. Although not all public institutions are included in this survey, the averages and changes over time at the same set of institutions offer consistency and the large number of institutions included provides a close approximation to state averages.

For reporting comparability, full-time undergraduate students were based on 45 quarter hours or 30 semester hours and full-time graduate students were based on 30 quarter hours or 20 semester hours. Tuition and required fees include total academic year tuition and required fees for full-time students. Optional fees such as parking or health care are not included unless they are paid by all full-time students.
